

Advancing Racial Justice through Union Work

Participant Handouts

UniServ Directors, Leaders, and Organizers work with members, supporters, and partners in many settings and must be highly skilled in leading, coaching and organizing across racial differences. NEA Center for Organizing and Affiliate Support in partnership with the NEA Center for Social Justice and the Campaign Lab created a training designed to build participants' understanding of individualized and systemic racism and provide examples of union-led racial justice interventions. Participants will learn how to deepen racial discourse skills in themselves and others, how to navigate issues of race that surface in their work, and how to access valuable resources for advancing racial justice.
